BRILLIANT WERE THE NUP-TIALS

At Central Presbyterian Church Princeton, Of Former Crittenden County Young Lady.

TENDERED RECEPTION AT HOPKINSVILLE.

At the Central Presbyterian church in this city, Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock the holy rites of matrimony solemnized between Mr. A. E. Greenhill and Miss Ethel N. Adams.

The nuptial ceremony making this twain one, was pronounced by the venerable Presbyterian divine, Rev. Nourse, of Hopkinsville, in impressive and eloquent manner.

The altar was artistically decorated with potted palms and flowers in blossom, forming a floral bank, behind which Miss Alma Schnabel, agifted musician of Corydon, Ky., and an intimate friend of the bride, presided at the organ. Those witnessing the ceremony were directed to their seats by ushers, Coleman Mooror of Hopkinsville, and Hinkle Rawles, of this city.

Shortly before four o'clock the carriages with the bridal party arrived before the church, and while the formation of the march was being made in the vestibule, Mrs. J. L. Wilkes sang, "I would Live or I'd Die for You," Miss Schnabel playing the accompaniment. As the last sweet note died away, the organ sounded the wedding march, and the bridal party entered, preceded by the ushers, one down either aisle. The attendants were Misses Melville Akin and Mr. C. A. Graham. Miss Mary Weaver Dyer and Mr. S. Wilson Adams. The bride entered upon the arm of her grandfather, S. Hodge, meeting the groom before the altar, where Rev. Dr. Nourse awaited them. The ceremony was brief but beautiful and solemn.

Later the entire wedding party, with a few other invited guests, took the 5:30 train for Hopkinsville where they were tendered a reception and bridal supper by the bride's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Moore. The party was composed of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Greenhill, Misses Melville Akin, Mary Weaver Dyer, and Alma Schnabel of Corydon Messrs. C. A. Graham, of New Decatur, Ala., Coleman Moore, of Hopkinsville, S. W. Adams and Hinkle Rawles, of Princeton, and the Rev. Dr. Nourse.

Besides those above named, others attending the nuptials from a distance were Mrs. S. A. Adams of Trinity, Ala., the mother of the bride, Mrs. H. C. Moore, of Hopkinsville, and Mrs. Emmons, Trinity Ala.

The bride is a native of Marion, Crittenden county, and with her parents Rev. R. H. and Mrs. S. A. Adams resided in this city, number of years ago, her father who died a few years later, being at the head of the Princeton Collegiate Institute. She had prepared herself for the profession of a trained nurse, a few months ago taking a post graduate course at Bellevue hospital, New York, and was located at Louisville.

She is a grand-daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. Hodge, this city, and a young lady of rare intellectual gifts and many accomplishments.

The groom is a popular and prosperous young business man of New Decatur, Ala., and greatly interested in Y. M. C. A. work, being assistant secretary of the organization at that place.

The newly wedded couple left Hopkinsville on an early morning train Wednesday for their future home in New Decatur, bearing with them the good wishes of a host of friends.

IN MEMORIAM.

Clara Porter Carnahan passed away January 1, 1910, aged four years and eleven months.

She was a member of the Beginners' class in the Methodist Sunday school, and the first one to pass from our midst into the fold of the loving Shepherd.

"We know he will but keep Our own and his until we fall asleep. We know he does not mean To break the strands reaching between The here and there."

She was a bright, affectionate child, ready to greet her teacher with a smile, so we miss her greatly.

We extend our sympathy to her bereaved parents and grandparents. May the little becoming hands gently guide them to the Father's home.

"I love to think that somewhere, In the country we call heaven, The land most fair of everywhere

Will unto them be given; A land of little faces—very little, very fair—

And every one shall know her own.

And cleave unto it there.

Oh, grant it, loving Father, to The broken hearts that plead!

Thy way is best—yet, oh, to be In perfect faith indeed!

To know that we shall find them.

Even them, the wee, white dead.

At Thy right hand in Thy bright land,

By the living waters led!"

HER S. S. TEACHER.

LETTER FROM HON. MARION F. POGUE

O. Wicker, of Frances Precinct Elected Assistant Clerk of the House, After a Hot Fight

HARMONY PREVAILS AND THE TREASURY IS EMPTY.

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 10, 1910. Friend Calmes:—

The first week of the legislature is now history. We have seen several assemblies, but some how, this one is to us, the queerest yet, and you may not be surprised if it turns up SOME SURPRISES before the thing is over. Everything and everybody seem so strange, but that may be because we are lost in the New Capital, and have not yet got our bearings. The New Capitol is to us yet what the city is to the backwoods visitor on his initial trip. It is well worth a trip to see the stately pile. Domes reaching skywards, colossal pillars, symmetric columns, marble walls and massive stairways all lend beauty, strength to this, one of the most splendid structures on the continent. No Kentuckian can view this building without a feeling of pride, how ever tight he may hold his own purse strings, he is bound to be glad that "somebody" had it done. And then, no charge of graft, in all the years of building has ever come to make any Kentuckian blush with shame. No graft, no extravagance! How good that sounds, when millions have been squandered in other states and scandals galore.

As to progress, we are now just before going to work. Organization has been perfected with perfect harmony, the Republicans in the House especially with drawing their candidates and voting for the Democratic caucus nominees.

George Wilson, of Union, is making and ideal Speaker of the House; he won without opposition.

All Crittendenites will be glad to know that Oscar Wicker, of Frances precinct, won out for Assistant Clerk of the House, after one of the hottest fights of our life. Well, you must fight if you would win.

Our old friend Bob Aiken has laid his insurance business by long enough to represent the good people of Caldwell county in this session. So will Senator Catlett look after our interests in the Senate Chamber.

I have never before seen harmony lying around in such big chunks—Democrats and Republicans actually sit together as desk mates, and it was rumored that a pair of these once irreconcilables were seen to take a drink of Old Taylor out of the same flask. But this is only heresay, and I must report these matters as second handed, because I have taken the pledge, you know.

My dear readers it is indeed a gloomy prospect your servant has before him to-night, howling winds without and snow two feet deep on every side, an empty treasury already and the land lady cross, perhaps anxious to know where she comes in. What, run a legislature without money? Yes, that is the way it looks now. Only a half million on hand and it belongs to the teacher of the State.

Oh what a glorious place soon for claim shavers! At the present rate June 15th will find us two million dollars in debt. What shall we do? Issue bonds or raise the tax rate? Or what, will you tell me?

Several bills have been offered in the Senate and Tuesday will be bill day in the House, then the flood gates will open and the bills will flow in.

We shall try to keep you posted about the happenings of the capital, and if you don't hear from us for quite a spell, you will know that stamps are out, for times are mighty close up here.

Your Servant,

MARION F. POGUE.

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE AND LABOR

Bureau of the Census—The Secretary's Vigorous Address Follow the President.

ALL WILL WILL BE GLAD TO READ THIS INFORMATION.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 8, 1910

Secretary Nagel of the Department of Commerce and Labor, under whose supervision is the work of the Bureau of the Census, at the conference of eastern state supervisors here, gave a vigorous talk on the subject of their duty, in which he emphasized and added to what had been said by the President to the Census field chiefs previously at the White House. The Secretary said:

"I wanted a chance to meet you—not to speak to you, but to shake hands and possibly exchange a word here and there as occasion might offer. There is a further reason why it will be difficult for me to say anything at this time. We have a rule that after the President has spoken his Secretaries have nothing to say. [Laughter] I happened to be in the White House when you were there, and heard what the President said. To now repeat would not give emphasis; to add is barely pardonable.

"I am very glad that you did have an opportunity, however, to meet the President himself and to hear from him just what the attitude of the Executive on this matter of the taking of the census is; and I am glad that he had an opportunity to say to you how thoroughly he is in earnest about what he has heretofore said.

"It is unnecessary for me to dwell upon the importance of a correct census. Of course, we want to take a better census than has ever before taken—and that is no disparagement of the work of predecessors. We ought to improve; we ought to improve for reasons which are self evident; we ought to improve because the need for a correct and adequate census now is greater than it has ever been before. It is so on account of the growth of our own country, and because we are coming into relations with other countries, so that a correct report and a reliable statement, to be used not only at home but for comparison with what other countries are doing, is the one essential foundation of all calculations.

"Now, we have done, as we think what we can to accomplish that result. So far as we could, we have placed in charge here at the head men who are experienced, competent, and enthusiastic. Of course the office here might perfect in its machinery and its administration, and yet the entire work would be a failure unless you did what the President indicated this morning. After all, granting a false premise anything can be proved. No matter how fine the superstructure may be, if the foundation is not right the building is not worth anything. It is for you to furnish the foundation for what is going to be done. You are responsible to the Director, to me and to the President. That is the importance of your position.

"Now, there is a lot of human nature in this thing, as was indicated to you this morning. You will have to be judges of a good many things, and you will have to show some discretion. And there is a lot of human nature beyond you when it comes to the activities of the enumerators themselves. A man might, for illustration, be a good man and yet not be a good enumerator because he might not have the confidence of the people with whom he has to deal. It is not always easy to get men of the qualifications.

It is easy enough to make examinations but it must be left for you to decide, according to such examinations as you may make, and according to such judgment as you may be able to apply to the cases, who are the proper men to be recommended to the Director for the work which is to furnish the foundation of the census that is ultimately to be completed.

"Now, I trust that that you are showing a lot of human nature in taking these places. When people say that the Government should be run on business principles, I always reply: 'Yes, so far as bookkeeping is concerned, that is true; but so far as employment of human energy is concerned, it can not be true, because the Government does not pay enough to make it worth while for competent men to do what is expected. That is the truth of it. If we did not have enthusiasm and sentiment and love of country and desire to appear right among our fellow men, the Government would never succeed on business principles alone.

It takes something more. It takes willingness for men to serve their country in the places to which they are called. Your places are important. I know we can not pay you but I hope you may find your compensation in something better. When the census has been completed and Director Durand has succeeded in making it the best that has ever been taken, you may be glad to feel that your part in it was worth while."

Letter From Oklahoma.

Oklmulgee, Okla. Jan. 5, 1910

Dear Editor:—Inclosed find $1.00 for the Record-Press for 1910.

We are having cold weather but not much rain or snow. December was the coldest for years, say the oldest settlers.

Crops were rather short last year, but prices were good so the farmers are getting along well. The cotton crop was good, so was the price, 15 cents in the seed.

The sheriff of this county confiscated about $4,000 worth of whiskey and beer found at the Frisco Depot two days before Christmas. The sheriffs from other counties did as well, and altogether the state got about $30,000. The sheriffs turn it over to the enforcement officer who ship it to Guthrie. The state sells it to dealers in other states. When this was a territory they poared it into the gutter.

Wishing editor, printers and all friends a happy New Year;

R. H. BUTLER.

Herbert Morris is on the sick list.
